Calculating Risk

We have all heard the other definition of assume at one time or another in our lives. Assuming something doesn’t get anybody off the hook when a disaster occurs. When athletes assume risk and suffer injuries, a court’s verdict won’t necessarily favor the owner of the facility where the accident occurred. Judges are finally getting this message, as reported by a professor of sports law at Iowa State University in Athletic Business this month.

The amount of risk assumed by athletes when playing a sport at a facility has been narrowed. John Wolohan alerted readers that Florida might have set a precedent when the Florida 3rd District Court of Appeal awarded damages to a player because of negligence in supervision. Wolohan says this opens the door for judgments favoring athletes because of poor facility maintenance, poor facility design or similar duty of a sports facility to provide reasonably safe playing conditions.

Any athletic director or facility manager who places too much trust in assumption of risk by athletes is making a bad assumption. How many players use your facilities? Do any of your facilities have flaws in design or maintenance, especially practice fields? When was the last time you turned down a request by the turf manager for equipment, supplies, more help, registration fee for a sports turf seminar or a raise? When was the last time your field’s drainage system, irrigation system and soil profile were overhauled? Have your liability and hospitalization insurance rates been climbing steadily?

Interpreting the law always creates more questions. Do you dare to assume how assumption of risk is interpreted in your state right now?

Just as there are experts in law, insurance and risk management, there are experts in sports turf design and management. Too many public facilities fail to hire or consult qualified sports turf specialists.

A big item on the to-do list of the sports turf industry should be some type of certification that identifies qualified experts in our field. Every city in the country has a number of skilled groundskeepers who would qualify immediately. There are also national consultants who will travel to your facility.

We should all seek the achievement of this year’s sportsTURF Man of the Year, Ed Birch — No field-related injuries on his school district’s fields in 12 years. He sought expert advice and assumed nothing.
