Staffing solutions offered at Conference

Seeking an intern, sales staff, an assistant or a head sports turf manager? The STMA Annual Conference and Exhibition is offering to you an easy way to jump start the hiring process.

At the new Career Center debuting in San Jose, which is sponsored by Ewing Irrigation, employment openings will be posted on a job board and also available for electronic viewing. There is no charge for an organization to have an opening posted, nor does the organization have to attend the conference. Just send the position description by Jan. 7, 2009, to STMAinfo@STMA.org. If you are attending the conference you can bring it with you to San Jose, or even create it on-site using one of our Career Center computers. You should also consider posting your on-site contact information on the position description, if you want prospective employees to contact you while you are in San Jose.

STMA is providing interview rooms for those who want to begin the hiring process while in San Jose. The private rooms will have a sign-up sheet for 30-minute time slots, Tues., Jan. 13, through Fri., Jan. 16, during business hours. Each room will have a table and four chairs, in case more people from your organization participate in the process.

In addition to reviewing the job openings, job seekers can drop off copies of their résumés for potential employers to pick up and review. Be certain to include your on-site contact information, so the employer can meet with you while in San José.

The STMA Career Center will provide tip sheets on resume writing and interviewing techniques, and will have a series of 20-minute presentations on career enhancing strategies.

The garnet colored paint on the turf in this stadium end zone is not a result of using too much paint in one area or even the result of spilling excess paint on the turf. The reason why this paint is still visible is because the turf growth has slowed in this circular area. The explanation as to why the turf growth has slowed is because the mascot for the FSU football team is a horse. This is the problem with football teams having large animals as mascots, the fact that they need to relieve themselves from time to time on your turf. Typically the area where the horse makes his mark is on the non painted areas leaving a brown spot in the days following the game. These brown spots are either plugged out or allowed to re-grow if adequate time is allowed between games. On this occasion, Renegade the horse chose a painted area to get some relief. At least it wasn’t a pile of horse chips or that may have given a whole new meaning to goal line stance!
